The "Chapter for the Ladies" John Montgomary Ward's new book "Base Ball," is very instructive, very timely and very amusing. It almid certainly be read by every woman who has the slightest interest in the great national game. Most men seem to take for granted that woman should know all about base ball with out being told, and their blumbers when witnessing a first game, are most amusing to the spectators and the escut, who supposed the gul be

They like to be written about in a complimentary manner if possible, but in some way at any rate. Smart statesmen endeavor to make friends of newspaper men, but when they can't make friends the axiom is that they had better make enemies. Atous sometimes does a man more good than praise. Four average congressman is a very conceited person. His bills and his reports and his speeches are the greatest things in the annels of congress. "What, you have not watched my efforts to do so and so? You don't know what I am doing Young man, go read the history of your country." Some congressmen imagine the people of the provinces are thirsting the people of the provinces are thirsting that the colld probably be senator from his state, speaker of the national house of

But think of a stupid fellow, fike the average congressman, wobbling about in this man. gressman, wobbling about in this manner and asking you, to go with him and try to be interested in all he is saying! Joe Cannon, of Illinois, who is himself a sort of original package, is another man who scatters his fire in private. conversation. Cannon in his quaint way likes to run the gamnt of topics which are in the public mind. There appears to be a sort of procession of thoughts going through his brain, and he is never content till the whole troop has been brought up for review. In his work as chairman of the symmetric for the symmetric content of the symmetric content chairman of the committee on appro-priations he has constantly before him the whole United States, and it seems that his mind is equally geographical and comprehensive. Still, if you get the chance to accompany Mr. Cannon on one of his intellectual rambles you will not regret it. Here and there it will not be casy to keep pace with him, for or certain parts of the road he travels like a limited train, but he has a faculty of Illumining his pathway so that even the dullest man may learn a little as he runs.

No one would suspect such a brainy and well organized intellectual giant as Spenker Reed of scattering. But, if the iruth must be told and I don't see why t shouldn't be scatters like an old shot gun; or, to use a better illustration, he is like an amateur sportsman with a new breech loader—he sallies out and in his Washingron, June 12.—When the business of the house of representatives is dulf and uninteresting, as it often is, we who sit up in the gallery to watch for things worth writing about must turn our attention from legislation to legislators. For this there is a good precedent, furnished by the legislators themselves. No other topic interests the average member of congress as much as himself. The dangers of the country which he prates so much of in his speeches, the odious acts of the opposition party which he is so fend of desouncing, are quick-

Men who can get up in the house or conate and deliver impromptin speeches of force and good construction, wabble all about a subject in

Probably this is the result teristics here seen in striking contrast. There are men, too law even to distant. f their training on the floor, where There are men too lazy even to dictate nothing ever is settled by argument. The most conspicuous example of sort of industry is Mr. Ezra B. Tayler. of Ohio, the successor of Garfield in a I house. Mr. Taylor boasts that he not missed a roll call in ten years, without doubt he is the only man thist ever served in congress who can wear three feather in his cap. There are four Telliors in the house, two from Ohio, own from Illinois and one from Tennessitic and it happens that they are all men who believe in attending to business. The result is that on nearly every roll call the clerk sings out, "Taylor of Illinois," "Taylor of Tennessee," "Ezra B. Taylor" and as all are Republicans the four names are followed by four Insty "yeas" or "nays," according as the majority side of the house is voting.

A few members of congress refuse to publish their city addresses in the congressional directory. Obviously they do not want to be bothered by the bores which infest the capital city and which seem to be fond of bothering members of congress. For the same reason a namber of statesmen rent houses in the outskirts of the city, where after nightfall they are not likely to be disturbed. Some years ago a member of the house from New York state lost his election by failing to print his address in the directory. A prominent and influential citizen of it shouldn't be scatters like an old shot gun; or, to use a better illustration, he is like an einsteur sportsman with a new breech loader he sallies out and in his eagerness and fondness for shooting takes a crack at everything he sees. When Reed draws his long gun it is a good time to take to the woods.

Another thing which I have noticed about congressmen is that many of them are liars. This does not sound pleusant, but it is true. I make the assertion with a full realization of its import, and, as the members themselves sometimes say in warin debate, with willingness to assume responsibility therefor, that a large per cent. of the members of congress habitually tell falsehoods. Of course shere are many honorable exceptions, and every reader has the right to include his friends in the latter category. But the liars are not much to be blamed. Lying is almost a necessity of public life. Members of congress are so besset by bores and borrowers and boggars that unless a man wants to make a boar of himself and get a reputation for meanness he must learn and practice the art of lying. I am convinced there are cases in which lying is a positive virtue, being merely a genteel and unoffending way of anying nay. If you were a member of the city directory.
